It is easy to stimulate the flow of milk but to increase milk production and keep your cows in good physical condition is a job for a fine feed like OLD FORT COW MIX a 32% Concentrate.

Mix this with your own grains and make any problem feed you may need.

Drop in and let us tell you more about this.

Mr. John H. Guthrie of LaRue, Ohio says (Quote):
For forty years I have owned and operated farm lands, raised and fed from one hundred to six hundred head of hogs a year. During 1936 I fed and marketed 400 head of hogs. These were big type Poland China hogs. The hogs were put on self feeders from weaning time. They were fed corn and all the Old Fort 40% Hog Mix they could eat. At six months the pigs averaged 250 pounds each. They had plenty of water at all times. The hogs had as fine a finish as I have ever seen and were sold to Charles Snow Son of Richwood, O. I have fed Tankage and another 40% HOG MIX but this is the finest bunch of hogs I ever turned off and the earlier Some of these hogs weighed as high as 260 pounds but the average through was 200 pounds. I feel that I saved money by feeding the old Fort 40% Hog Mix because the hogs went on the market a month earlier than they have been going in former years. You will find in feeding OLD FORT 40% HOG MIX again I Tankage that your pigs will drink considerable more water. Up until this time I feel that the OLD FORT 40% HOG MIX has been the most profitable feed that I have ever fed. (End Quote)

Three drafts were taken for the American army. Some congressmen who opposed conscription predicted there would be riots and bloodshed such as occurred in New York City during the Civil war but there were no major disturbances.

Hundreds of wives, mothers and sisters wrote to the war department asking exemption for their men but others recommended that their husbands be drawn for service. One woman said in a letter to Provost Marshal General Crowder in charge of the draft that her husband didn't want to go to war but he had no good reason for staying home so the army might better make a soldier out of him.

WEDNESDAY MARCH 24 1937

In Twenty Years

[illegible] year ago the United States [illegible] of the World war [illegible]

[illegible] for [illegible] this country was in the [illegible] circumstances [illegible] into the war

Since the circumstances may never be [illegible] it is profitable of interest now to think of one of them—the fact that in the spring of 1917 hundreds of thousands of Americans actually wanted war

Fighting was heroic it was glorious Patriotism demanded belligerency Skeptics and pacifists were cowardly and lacked something in love for their country That was the way most Americans looked at war in 1917

It would be pleasant to be sure that in 20 years more of them have learned one thing about war they did not know then

Calmer Heads

There was [illegible] has been influential in [illegible] sloppiness in distinguishing between unorganized and organized labor Now more than ever there is need to get the right name

Organized labor is being blamed for sit down strikes The method is identified in fact with CIO That organization with a problem of face saving to handle is keeping quiet

Its leaders know many sitdown strikes haven't any more to do with organized labor than with the weather They know and the sooner they get around to admitting it the better that sitdown strikes are peculiarly their own problem for an entirely different reason

For unless sitdowns are outlawed as being against public policy it won't take malcontents long to learn that they can tie up production and coerce employers without belonging to a labor organization or if they do belong to an organization that they can sit down without waiting for orders Calmer heads in union labor shouldn't require much more time to understand that they are sowing the seeds of a whirlwind when they pretend they don't know what's wrong with sitdown strikes

Each Man His Own Judge

It's all very well to look at the calendar and say Well spring is here But it really doesn't mean anything

For spring is here when it can be seen felt smelled and heard Each man must be his own judge of the matter

Possibly the best rule ever devised for knowing when spring really has arrived is this

If the back steps are warm enough and dry enough to sit on comfortably if the grass in the backyard is green enough to look at pleasantly if the birds are singing enough to listen to enjoyably and if the ads have that ineffable odor of things beginning to grow then it's spring

Experiment for the first warm thing more than a set of wooden steps and a backyard to look at One intoxication still prevails in these communities

What's Become of It?

One of the encouraging promises which followed the election was that an unemployment census of first would be taken by the secretary of commerce Mr Roper made the announcement

It was greeted cheerfully It is a mystery why no official count of unemployment has been attempted Even if it did not prove to be 100 per cent accurate it would furnish more information than is available now

If recollection is correct a few months ago all got excited late November about an unemployment census They seemed to want something for sucker to believe in Nothing that these were excellent reasons Mr Roper to the contrary notwithstanding and who here would be any more convinced of man out of work

Still it is fun to believe the census may have been right about something for once It's beginning to look that way It's almost spring and no one's thinking about an unemployment census any more

made goods into states which ban their sale The supreme court unanimously upheld those laws

He said enactment of the proposal and of the Nunan Moffat bill pending in the New York legislature would close the largest market in the United States to the products of child labor

In line with arguments made in the senate hearings into yesterday by Rep Lemke Republican of North Dakota Wheeler contended that much of the difficulty encountered by recent legislation in the courts resulted from poor draftsmanship and inadequate defense by government counsel

"I'm against NRA he said "Nevertheless I believe legislation like NRA could be phrased in a constitutional manner

The wheeler bill would define child labor as employment of a minor under the age of 16 years Exceptions would be granted for employment of children in farming

Recommending a constitutional amendment if necessary to assure advanced legislation Rep Lemke yesterday followed Raymond Moley former Roosevelt brain trusters in denouncing the President's court bill

The supreme court has made mistakes Lemke said and I have severely criticized it But the executive and congress also have gone counter to the will of the people many times The issue here is not between the President and the supreme court It is between the President and the people

The Crumbling Seymours

Mr. Mannersfield [illegible] old [illegible] and [illegible] Miss Ellen Wal[illegible] actress friend[illegible] the reverend John[illegible] the richest [illegible] Cleveland [illegible] He has re[illegible] scars of a [illegible] there resulting [illegible] an oil [illegible]

[illegible] Mrs. Cleveland [illegible] Lance [illegible] Lance [illegible] brown sweater [illegible] trousers [illegible]

[illegible] had a dog's good [illegible] from [illegible] shoulder [illegible] wagging and keen [illegible] he had the same shame and [illegible] Lance was on [illegible] knee behind him as a [illegible] among [illegible] face was wise and [illegible]

Grandad rambled [illegible] night when he was [illegible] said with [illegible] "We [illegible] Is [illegible] [illegible]

On [illegible] Eve said [illegible] going up [illegible] hard on [illegible] hours now [illegible] half dozen times [illegible] And if [illegible] had [illegible] remembered the [illegible] run-down check the Seymours [illegible] too that the drunken half-witted father of the ragged [illegible] would [illegible] sell it and throw away [illegible] money as he must have thrown away the money he had received from the Clevelands

Lance's vacant lantern-jawed face darkened "I'm his namesake I'm the eldest son Nobody hasn't no right to it except me"

George put an end to the scene by speaking with a sharp [illegible] to the poor boy seemed to recognize

"Come, Seymour, you [illegible] wouldn't have frightened [illegible] this way You mustn't either Go on now The picture won't run away it's going to be hung where it always belonged I'll come down and talk things over with you about it"

He shepherded the boy out Eve standing at the window saw the stooped shambling figure going miserably away and turned to George impulsively with "Can't you do anything?"

He was as moved as she

"I'll try I promise you Eve," he said

"These dreadful rainy days," Mrs. Cleveland said

Eve was on the verge of answering sharply "We're dreadful I admit," when she saw George's distressed face and said instead "I'm afraid it's time we went back, Ellen"

Mrs. Cleveland and Muzzi had collected themselves by now, began to be cordial and hospitable and asked the girls to stay for lunch Eve, [illegible] without even a look at the restored spacious loveliness of the house, gathered her guests, [illegible] Mrs. Cleveland managed to get in a word about the lacquer cabinets as they went but Eve was in no mood to sell anybody lacquer cabinets

George went with them He followed them again through the orchard path

How on earth did the Seymours manage to run to seed so completely? he asked of Eve, shoulders She was interested enough to turn and say "Uncle Henry knows if anybody does"

Uncle Henry was plowing up the vegetable bed Interrogated, he stopped and leaned on the plow George had lent him

He said "Well, some might say it was the hand of God My grandfather said it was being too high headed The Seymour men lived too hard for one thing drank and cards as well as book learning And they had a queer streak, the women couldn't bear to marry anything but fools, but they could look down on one another as being the only kind good enough for Seymour And when you marry fools for eight generations and half of them your own kin, my grandpa her said, you breed fools Guess he was right"

But oh can anything be done

[illegible] had a [illegible] feel to the long old [illegible] friendliness and home Peter had hung the curtains for Eve while she was out that morning as a delightful surprise and spare down the hope of possessing the north end of the attic when it was emptied worked like a beaver at getting it cleaned up Eve recognized with pleasure the two graceful backless chairs on window seats in their faded glory Perhaps Ishmael carve ended he must She saw have got Uncle Henry's [illegible] with the [illegible] old carved sofa Though the furnace was on a fire snapped pleasantly and Peter's arrangement of all had seemed it again that [illegible] candles [illegible] not only on the mantel but in both candelabra of the gilt girandoles

Marilla was warm enough to have draped her long thinness in a shaded chiffon [illegible] dress frock and bound her straight [illegible] hair with a gilt band Peter was white shirted and white trousered early as it was They looked like a country house party on the stage Eve decided a little amused over her own and George's unchanged rough woolens George was in flannels knickers and coat and woolen pull over and she hadn't changed her blue sweater and skirt or done anything indeed except brush down her bright rings of hair and set them back with her fingers use powder and lipstick quickly after a hasty wash

It was a comfortable sort of evening home and easy and laughing As it ended Eve felt as if she had known the other three forever She felt at peace All it needed was Denny's laughing presence to make it perfect She wanted him suddenly and acutely and it came to her that a little Mitz business was silly Why shouldn't she herself speak of Denny to this kindly almost old man sitting over by the fire who [illegible] on his cheesemen? No tonight perhaps but next time he came

Denny phones Eve excitedly tomorrow—he's to get a better job

Big League 1937 Payroll Hits Record of $3,200,000

THE SPORTS SPOTLIGHT

While big league baseball players are in the south for spring training there are hundreds of semi-pro and sandlot players who are getting ready for the season which opens in April. Many of these players will get their chance to play with big league teams this year.

Annual all-star baseball games of every description are reported rolling off the presses and marbles are lined up in the ring—the circus season is getting under way—and the Marion Steam Shovel baseball team is preparing for the opening game of the season.

Players going to Florida were in at the finish last season meant that they brought back their fighting spirit and second division clubs are going to make it interesting for the pennant hopefuls to have a chance.

Changes are expected in many of the lineups of the Sunday school and Commercial league teams as new faces replace those of veteran softballers. Wesley Sunday, three time league champs and winners of the Fifth Ward Series are going virtually unchallenged as the time for the first practice session rolls around.

Seeks To Repeat

The team expected to be practically in act will be making a determined fight against a crowd of competitors who will be just as determined to unseat the 1936 champions. E. Street M. E. league winners, the Marion Steam Shovel team, Hiatts of the Commercial loop and the Keller coached champs of the All Star conference. Axe Funeral Home are all expected to be back in suit trying to repeat their title performances.

It shouldn't be many days now until the actual practice sessions get under way. Of course diamonds in the city parks are still probably pretty soggy but working on the same principal as the early bird that gets the worm some aggressive club will be cutting the apple around to get in the spring training at the first opportunity.

Opening Early in May

The season usually officially opens early in May which according to the calendar is only about five full weeks distant. City championship teams have whipped themselves into shape in much less time than that but most of the players are chafing at the bit awaiting their managers initial call for practice.

Prospects of a warm spring season have cheered the hearts of managers and players alike and it won't be much of a surprise to find the season's opening practice announced for an early April day. While softball commission members are apparently stewing and fretting over proposed rule changes and other plans to bolster spectator interest the players fret from the worries which seemingly dog the heels of the governing body and illegal a banner season for the 1937 schedule.
